

CIRCUIT COURT MATTERS

Misdemeanors and Boot-Legging Cases Occupy the Attention of the Court.

Last Wednesday and Thursday were taken up in Circuit Court with the trial of Commonwealth cases, the most of which were misdemeanors. Many of them were boot-legging cases and too boot-legger found that the way of the transgressor is hard. Only one charged with the illicit sale of whiskey escaped, while several were given the limit—$100 fine and forty days in jail. Hardin Warner, a negro, was tried for shooting at and wounding one Joe Young, another ebony hued citizen, and was acquitted, on his plea of self defense. The little negro, John Wm. Hardesty, was tried for pinning an obstruction on the L. & N. track, near Valley Hill, but the jury hung.

On Friday the civil docket was called and the now famous Prath-r vs. Keeling case was entered into. This is a controversy over a strip of land consisting of about an eighth of an acre, but it is being as bitterly fought as if millions were in the balance. The case is the third trial of the case. The plaintiff rested at 3 p. m. Monday and evidence for the defense is now being heard. It is possible that they may consume the remainder of the week.

TO THE DEMOCRATIC VOTERS

Hon. Ben Johnson Sends an Open Letter to the Voters of the Fourth District.

This is what is commonly known as an "off year" in politics. There is so little discussion of politics in the "off years" that the people frequently forget that there is an election at all. For this reason I wish to remind you that there will be an election in your CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT ON NOV. 8, NEXT.

The Republican party has, during nearly fifty years in office, grown drunk with power, and has, through the recently enacted tariff act, imposed such heavy taxes upon the people that it is next to impossible for the people to live because of the high prices of clothing, farming implements and all manufactured articles. So outrageous has this taxation of the people become, in order to enrich the manufacturers, that the Republican party in the East, in the West and in the North is split in two; and the Independent Republicans, who can not, in conscience, support the regular Republican party any longer in their policy of pilfering the people, have rebelled and are no longer willing to support such policies. The people in the East, in the West and in the North have uprisen and have defeated many of the Republican leaders who were responsible for these policies.

The people south of the Ohio river have almost lost hope of ever being set free from the tariff robbery. But hope is in sight. Thousands of Republicans in the East, in the West and in the North are calling upon the Democrats and the Republicans of the South to go to the polls on Nov. 8, and make certain that men are sent to Congress who will vote against a continuance of the tariff robbery.

I was in Congress when the present tariff bill was passed. I voted against it, and, if re-elected, will use whatever intellect and all the energy I possess to bring about a downward revision of the tariff.

The convention which nominated the present candidate for Congress in this district is an opponent to me adopted a resolution praising the administration of President Taft. President Taft could have vetoed and thereby have defeated this tariff bill, but, instead, he signed it, thereby giving it his approval, and, therefore, it is reasonable to suppose that if the Republican candidate for Congress in the Fourth District should be elected he will vote to continue this high tariff bill, under which the people are hungry and cold.

Again I ask that you go to the polls on Nov. 8th and cast your vote for me and a reduction of taxes.

Sincerely yours,
BEN JOHNSON,
Barstow, Ky.

MEADE COUNTY FOR JOHNSON

A Sweeping Majority Scheduled For the Popular Congressman, in That County.

The Meade County Messenger, in the following article, predicts that Congressman Ben Johnson's majority in Meade county on November 8, next, will be one of the largest of the largest, ever given a candidate for office in Meade county. There are at least one hundred and fifty old line Republicans in the county who will vote for Mr. Johnson. Such a condition has never existed in this county before.

The popularity of Ben Johnson among all classes in Meade county is largely due to his generosity, his kindness and his love for the people. He is looked upon in Meade county as a sort of "friend and neighbor," who is always anxious to aid and go a lend a helping hand. For this reason he is helping himself in the esteem of the people in the county. And then, too, his record in Congress is without a flaw. He has fought for every interest of the farmer and laborer—he has fought when the odds were against him, with never a thought of faltering.

There is not a more conscientious or able representing body of the people in the National Congress. He towers head and shoulders above the average Congressman in intellect and in ability to doze results; his honesty has never been doubted and his integrity stands unquestioned by any living human being. But there are a thousand elements in Ben Johnson that are admirable—elements that have made him a great man among the greatest of men.

Meade county voters appreciate Mr. Johnson, and just to show him that their appreciation is sincere, they will vote for him on Nov. 8, irrespective of party ties or anything else. Mark this prediction: his majority in this county will be abnormal.

Indeed, there are few people in Meade county who will oppose Mr. Johnson. It is safe to say that every Democrat in Meade who can possibly get to the polls on Nov. 8, will be there to vote for him, and we repeat that standing shoulder to shoulder with these Democrats be one hundred and fifty or two hundred Republicans.

It is the happiest condition we have ever seen in this county, during our history of fifteen years, and it was brought about by Mr. Johnson's liberality, generosity, and fair treatment towards Democrats. Republicans and people of all political faiths—by his unbiased representation of the Fourth Congressional District in the National Congress.

BRINGING DOWN POSTAL DEFICIT

The Significant Sum of $11,000,000 Saved by Economical Management.

Washington, Oct. 27.—Figures, the compilation of which was completed at the postoffice department today, show that the deficit during the fiscal year ended June 30 was $11,500,000. The deficit of the previous fiscal year was $17,000,000 so that, in one year, the deficit was brought down to $6,100,000.

In commenting on tonight upon the saving of $11,500,000 last year. Postmaster General Hitchcock said: "This tremendous saving was made without the curtailment of the postal facilities. In eliminating wasteful expenditures the department has been exceedingly careful not to hamper in any way the constant development of the postal service required to meet the increasing business needs of the country."

"In a word, the department's policy is to extend the service as rapidly as is warranted by increasing population and to accomplish its savings, not by the curtailment of postal facilities, but by handling in a more systematic and businesslike manner the constantly expanding volume of the mails."

The tables prepared indicated that in the furtherance of the policy more than 1,500 new postoffices with the necessary officers, employees and equipment were established during the last fiscal year.

Great extensions were made in the rural delivery system, 515 new routes with a total mileage of 12,235 miles, being put into operation.

There were appointed from the eligible list of the civil service commission more than 800 postal clerks to enlarge the working forces of city postoffices, and more than 1,000 additional letter carriers. The mailing mail service was strengthened by 750 new employees, all of which were taken from the civil service eligible list. The aggregate salaries of the new employees appointed during the year from the civil service list exceeds $2,000,000.

KENTUCKY RIVER HIGH BRIDGE

Fourteen Million Pounds of Steel Required in the Construction of the Massive Work.

Early in 1911, the new High Bridge which is to span the Kentucky river, at High Bridge in Jessamine County, on the Queen & Crescent Route will have been completed. It will be the highest bridge spanning a navigable stream on the American continent and is to be the most massive structure of its length and breadth known to the civilized world and will have a sustaining capacity of 7,500 tons. In the erection of this wonderful span, more than two million two hundred thousand rivets and fourteen million pounds of tested steel are required. Almost two years were spent in manufacturing the great steel sections that are being combined to produce this marvelous product of American skill and genius. The old bridge which has attracted sightseers of every nation is expected to open in weight one-fourth as massive as the steel of which the new bridge is being made. On account of the enormous material of the new structure it will have about five times the sustaining power of the old one. From the top of the rail of the new bridge to the water in the river below, the distance is 315 feet. It will require 140,000 pounds of steel rails and 2,500 tons to build the double track across the bridge which is 1,223 feet in length. Thousands of people are now being attracted to the scene to witness the building of a structure the like of which has never where else on the whole American continent and it is fitting that this marvelous handiwork of men should have as its setting a landscape that is unrivaled in natural beauty and charm.

Petresque Kentucky river, with its towering cliffs, lifting themselves more than three hundred feet above the water line, are in full view from the train while passing over the bridge. At this point the winding stream has been denominated by tourists of all countries as the Switzerland of the Western Hemisphere. The wonderful height and powerful strength of the connecting link of steel may be attained elsewhere, but the amazing picture which nature has painted for the background can never be approached in the category of human achievements.

ABUNDANCE OF WHEAT

Prices Should be Lowered in Accordance With the Law of Supply and Demand.

Chicago, October 26.—Wheat is piling up in all positions in the face of smaller receipts which shows that the situation is decidedly bearish. Besides the increased stocks at Minneapolis and the importing countries of the supplies now held in those markets the visible supply is likely to display a further increase to-morrow. While the world's shipments for the past week show a falling off from the previous week, the country over was increasing. Mr. Powderly said that there was no let up in the demand for men for work on the railroads, on construction, and the like but that the demand for farm labor was on the increase.

"When we began this bureau, two and one-half years ago," he said, "we heard a great deal of the cry 'Back to the Farm.' But most of the men who were talking about going back to the farm had never been on the farm in the first place."

"Today, a change has taken place. While in New York recently, I found that the interest on the part of aliens and immigrants already in this country in farm work is increasing. Men on construction work and other labor in the city are registering in the hope of being sent to the farm."

No less than 8,000 persons have been sent to permanent position on the farms. Information regarding farm employment and conditions has been sent to no less than 70,000. Of the 8,000 who have been given positions, Mr. Powderly says but twenty have failed to stay. He says too, that these people who have gone to the farms have been writing to their friends abroad or to friends employed in the cities, and the result is a gradually growing tendency to go to the land. The demand for farm work comes from all over the country.

Mr. Powderly says one reason why men are going more and more to the farms is that farmers are coming more and more to employ help the year round. Formerly this was not the case. They were kept only during the busy season.

From some of the men who two years ago or so were sent to work on the farms, inquiries are now beginning to come for help on farms of their own. In other words, sturdy and frugal immigrants have gone to work on farms, saved their money and have bought themselves pieces of land—Guy E. Mitchell in Farmers Home Journal.

ACCOMMODATING HOTEL CLERK

Makes No Difference to Him What Kind of a Man is Wanted—They're all on Tap.

Jones was lonesome and was tired of lounging about the hotel office, so going up to the clerk he said: "I wish you would find some person, around the hotel who would join me in a game of pinocle."

The clerk called a bell-boy, and said to him: "Find Mr. Isaacstein for this man."

Isaacstein came to the boy, and in a few minutes' time Isaacstein was up at the clerk's desk being introduced to Jones and a few minutes later the pinocle game was on in earnest.

BACK TO THE FARM

Terence V. Powderly Says There is a Decided Movement in That Direction.

According to Terence V. Powderly, chief of the division of information of the Department of Commerce and Labor, there is a decided movement of people "Back to the Farm." When asked as to whether the demand for labor the country over was increasing, Mr. Powderly said that there was no let up in the demand for men for work on the railroads, on construction, and the like but that the demand for farm labor was on the increase.

"When we began this bureau, two and one-half years ago," he said, "we heard a great deal of the cry 'Back to the Farm.' But most of the men who were talking about going back to the farm had never been on the farm in the first place."

GRAPHIC ACCOUNT OF N. CAROLINA TRIP

Descriptive of Magnificent Mountain Scenery and Picturesque "Tar Heel" Localities.

As I have been asked by many people in this county to describe my trip to the mountainous section of North Carolina, during the winter of 1907-8, I have written a letter which will be of interest to many who contemplate spending a winter away from the extreme ailments encountered in Kentucky as well as those afflicted with lung ailments or rheumatism.

My objective point in Tryon, a lovely little village, situated in Paeolet Valley, near Paeolet river, a station on the Southern railway, and among the beautiful pine forests of western North Carolina.

Tryon is, indeed, a picture-que little town, peopled principally by transient residents, and has an altitude of from 1,200 to 1,500 feet above sea level, and is about 200 miles from the Atlantic, its nearest point being the aristocratic old city of Charleston, S. C. Here we have scenery that is both picturesque and grand. It is not a natural wonder, however, but a world-wide fame, known as Niagara Falls or Yellow to the Park. Its scenery is not too grand to be viewed daily, neither does it overwhelm one with its beautiful simplicity. Nature's handiwork is portayed in all its splendor, and the light, fresh, dry air permeates the system with a desire to penetrate the almost impenetrable forests of rhododendron and climb the hills or scale the heights of the friendly mountains, without a feeling of exhaustion.

Then, too, to the inexperienced, as was the writer, when one stands upon the summit of Tryon peak, whose altitude is 3,249 feet, one is overcome with a feeling of insignificance, as he views the lovely valley below, and the eye is cast over the thousands of acres of beautiful evergreen, interspersed here with the golden-leaves of the deciduous trees extending in a great slope to the south land. Then again, our mere nothingness is more plainly felt as we look to the north and west and the great stretch of the Blue Ridge mountains seem to penetrate the sky. From this peak one can view the outline of Mt. Mitchell, in Mitchell county, N. Carolina, whose altitude exceeds that of any peak east of the Rockies, being 6,743 feet above sea level. The longer you look the more it grows upon one, and to think that one earthly hand ruled o'er it all. It seems inconceivable.

Here we find the best all-weather climate in the United States, east of the Rocky mountains, perhaps. It is mild and dry and is sheltered on the north and west by a string of mountains, varying in height from 1,200 to 3,250 feet, thereby preventing any sudden or serious changes. The fogs, so common here, are seldom seen. The only opening from the mountains is from the south, therefore the wind is a soft breeze, blowing fast enough to keep the air fresh and not cold enough to chill. It rains very little and the heavy, damp atmosphere, so evident here immediately after a winter rain, is never felt there at all. According to statistics the year of 1905-6 afforded 256 warm, sunny days. Sunrocks, if ever, falling from above 25 degrees, and never rising above 98 degrees.

The surface is hilly or mountainous and soil is dry and sandy, thereby insuring proper drainage. Immediately after a hard rain one can walk in the dirt without the least inconvenience. Several farmers there raise frogs and turkeys in popular cafes and small hotels with the main aim of supplying the troops before they get tired.

The water system in Tryon is fed from the mountains by pure mineral water and is forced through the town by its own pressure, the pipes having been laid in the ground, and fresh running water all the time. It is, certainly, a valuable addition to remain in the open, even to the extent of sleeping on the porches, or in specially constructed rooms and summer cottages. The latter are excellent places for recuperation, after suffering from nervous prostration, lung affection, or other ailments.

Tryon is at the foot of Saluda grade, which is the worst grade in the world. It is a grade of 700 feet to the mile for 3 miles. It is 21 miles from Hendersonville, which is also an excellent place for recuperation. Asheville is 42 miles away. Lake Toxaway, the greatest artificial lake in the South, is a fine place for engineering and masonry, an undertaking completed at the expense of a member of the Vanderbilt family, is also 42 miles from Tryon, and affords fishing the year round, being in a forest reserve, and is a fine place for recuperation, after suffering from nervous prostration, lung affection, or other ailments.

PASSING OF THE

THE LITTLE SCHOOL

THE LITTLE SCHOOL, a new building at the country school near Lexington, Ky.

THE district school must go. The familiar little structure at the country crossroads is doomed to extinction. Two hundred thousand of them, spread from ocean to ocean and from border to border, are marked by the hand of progress. The keys have already been turned in the doors of several thousand, to be opened no more to the purposes of education for the country youth.

The half dozen families who sent their children to the district school each morning, who watched them trudge down the country road in all kinds of weather, and who gathered on Friday afternoons in the little schoolroom to hear the "speaking," have come to realize that what they could not do by themselves they can do in co-operation with the families of the next district and the surrounding districts.

The one-room neighborhood school, with one teacher, is passing away. In its place is coming a new factor in country life, a school six or eight times as large, with three or four teachers of training and ability; a school prepared to bring to the country boy or girl an education that promises to revolutionize the rural development of America.

The country school has passed the point where it constitutes a playground for the country lad when there is no work to be done on the farm. It has taken on more importance than as a rendezvous for bobbed and hayrack parties, bob suppers and ice cream festivities.

A remarkable movement is under way in the United States, almost unnoticed by the general public and little appreciated by many of the farming community themselves, that destined to play a most important part in the education of the 7,000,000 children of school age, and of the generation that are to follow them along the devious road of learning.

Yesterday the country boy toiled through indifferent roads and across plowed fields to the district school. Today a big carryall, full of rollicking children and driven by a well-to-do horse, rolls up to the farmhouse gate each morning with the regularity of the rural mail carrier.

The children pile in, the man moves on to the next farmhouse and accumulates more children. Through the winding roads of a district, often forty miles square, half-dozen of these big wagons, maintained at public expense, are bringing hundreds of children every day to a two-story schoolhouse, such as the country pupils of a few years ago never dreamed of. At night the wagons roll back over the morning's route, depositing children at their own doors.

The country is thus solving the "back to the farm" problem. It has found the means to stop the great outpouring of sturdy boys and girls to the city schools, where they have been educated "away from the farm." It has succeeded in bringing into the country, almost to the farmhouse gate, an education for the country youth equal in its quality to that of the city school, and supplemented by a vocational training for near future on the farm. It is an education for the farm, not for the plowshare to the city.

New Consolidated School.

The new school is known for want of a better name as the "consolidated rural school." The name fails to describe this great new institution of education, fitted to do greater and better work on the farm. It is a social center about which the interests of an entire township are beginning to revolve. It is a model experimental farm, a dairy farm, a forestry school, a horticultural school, it is an institution whose whole system, and whose aim, is to "educate the country youth."

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE

MOST IMPORTANT NEWS GATHERED FROM ALL PARTS OF KENTUCKY

THREE CAME BACK

Five More Who Escaped With Them Still at Large.

Elkton.—Three of the eight prisoners who escaped from the county jail by sawing through the bars and making a rope out of bed clothing, voluntarily returned. Among those still at large is Theodore Jeffers, who has served a term of ten years from Simpson county for criminal assault. Buck Blackwell, another ex-convict charged with housebreaking and larceny, has been since his escape, and bloodhounds are on his trail.

A white prisoner charged with manslaughter refused to leave with the others.

COUNTY MAY PURCHASE BUST.

Lexington.—It is probable that the marble bust of Henry Clay, made by the famous sculptor, Joel T. Hart, and which is owned by Mrs. Rosa Verner Johnson Rhet, will be purchased by the county and given a prominent place in the corridor of the courthouse.

County Judge J. Percy Scott stated that the price of $500, for which the bust could be secured, was reasonable for such a work of art, and if it was found that the condition of the county treasury would permit it the purchase would be made.

The bust, which is of Italian marble, was taken from life by Hart, Kean, and is the work of a master sculptor. It is the bust of Henry Clay, made by the famous sculptor, Joel T. Hart, and which is owned by Mrs. Rosa Verner Johnson Rhet, will be purchased by the county and given a prominent place in the corridor of the courthouse.

There is already an excellent bust of Henry Clay in the courthouse, but it is thought that the county should not miss an opportunity of securing so fine a work of art as this bust by Joel T. Hart.

SPEEDY JUSTICE.

Charles Little, Slayer of Hargis' Nephew, Sentenced to Hang.

Jackson.—Charles Little, who assassinated Matt Crawford at his place of business, two miles from Jackson, was tried by jury and his punishment fixed at death. T. T. Cope was appointed by the court to represent the defendant, and after the jury had received the case a plea of guilty for his client and in a short space pleaded for mercy.

Senator E. B. Hogg, of Booneville, Ky., requested speedy action on the commonwealth, and asked for a verdict that would make an example by the punishment met.

The trial of the case has established the fact that the defendant had been in the county for about 10 minutes and returned a verdict fixing the punishment at death.

PLEADED GUILTY AND FINED $800

Defendant in Case of Insurance Fraud Pleads for Mercy.

Louisville.—Timothy T. O'Leary, one of three defendants on trial here for conspiracy to defraud The Indiana National Life and Commercial Life Insurance Co., both of Indianapolis, Ind., pleaded guilty and agreed to accept a fine of $800 and costs.

The trial of P. J. Needham and Dr. C. G. Schott is still in progress. Needham, on the stand, said President Heliker of The Commercial Life Insurance Co., agreed to give him $700 to get hold of the policy issued upon the life of Wm. E. Ryder. The offer, he says, was made soon after the death of Ryder.

The payment on this policy was the occasion for the investigation of the alleged fraud.

Bad Rudaway Accidents.

Mr. Polin Edelen suffered the loss of a fine mare last night, valued at $275. Mr. Edelen's son, Tom, was driving in to town on the Bardstown pike and had gotten to the point of intersection of the Bardstown and Bloomfield pikes, when he and Howard Tatum and S. H. Wesley collided. Young Edelen's buggy was overturned and the frightened horse began to run. Having freed herself from the harness she was running at full speed and ran as far as the tobacco warehouse, where she came in contact with a gravel wagon, tearing her breast in such a horrible manner that she died shortly afterward. The crash made by her impact with the wagon scared a horse driven by Len McIntire and caused it to turn his buggy over the bridge near the railroad track, below town, throwing Mr. McIntire and a lady companion into the branch. Neither, however, was injured.

Death of Child.

"Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not for such is Kingdom of Heaven." Little Delena Barber died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Barber, Saturday last, aged fifteen months, and was buried Sunday afternoon in St. Dominic's cemetery. The baby had been sick for only a short time but from the beginning of her illness her parents and physician had but little hope of her recovery. The little girl was a beautiful rosy faced, bright-eyed child who not only spread sunshine in the Barber home but also throughout the entire neighborhood. She was loved and nursed and petted by the neighbors as if she were one of the household, and they, as well as the parents will miss the sunny presence of little Delena.

"The Fighting Parson."

This play was presented to a fair-sized audience last evening at the Opera House, by the W. F. Mann Co., and proved an admirable attraction. The threatening skies prevented many from attending who would, otherwise, gladly have witnessed this fine production. It is a clean, moral play, not an objectionable feature occurring during its whole rendition. The acting was good, every member of the company displayed unusual aptitude for their particular role, and where all did so well it would be invidious to particularize. Much applause greeted their efforts and those who were present were well pleased. The Opera House manager, Mr. Leo Hayden, has billed another fine attraction, St. Elmo, to be presented on the 16th inst., and we shall be glad, indeed, if it comes up to the standard of the last.

What Becomes of the Pennies?

Although the Philadelphia mint coined 146,000,000 pennies last year, and many other millions in years before, the mystery of where the little copper coins go still is unsolved, and Director of the mint, George E. Roberts, estimates that the big plant will make another 100,000,000 this year. Pennies, more than any other sort of coin, disappear from circulation mysteriously. The government does not mind coining them, for they yield a fine profit. A pound of copper, costing $10 about 13 cents, will make one dollar in pennies.

Mrs. WILLIAMS.

Sorry He Spoke.

There is a certain West Philadelphia bachelor who is very fond of children. Recently when he was riding on a Chestnut street trolley car a woman sat opposite him with a baby in her arms. Suddenly the baby began to cry. Every one in the car seemed to be annoyed and a general scowl went across his face. He tried to show by the benign expression of his face that the crying of the baby was sweet music to him. He smiled at the youngster, but the noise only grew louder. Finally he leaned across the car.

"Perhaps there's a pin sticking him," he said in a stage whisper and after the manner of one who understands all the complexities and troubles of baby life. There was a profound silence in the car until the mother answered:

"No, there's no pin sticking him," she said at last in a tone of scorn and with much emphasis on the last word. Then she continued, "It's scared because you're making faces at him."

After that the bachelor leaped into pensiveness. --Philadelphia Times.

The Starling's Tongue.

It is extraordinary how many persons are under the impression that, in order to enable a bird to talk, it is absolutely necessary to cut or slit its tongue. I have heard that this fallacy had its origin in the following story: A man had a number of starlings in a large cage marked "Fine Young Starlings--Only 1 Shilling Each" and as each would be purchased arrived the man would say, "There's a fine bird there, sir," pointing out one of them; "but I want half a crown for him, because he's the only one with a cut tongue, so he is bound to be a talker." He would then proceed to catch the bird and show the cut tongue and invariably succeed in effecting a sale. This delusion would be repeated as each new customer arrived and departed relishing at his good bargain. The reader perhaps is not aware that all starlings have a month's preparation for the extremity of the tongue, which gives the appearance of a little piece having been snipped out of it. --London Strand.

The Creaked Screamer.

"I was surprised to run across an old acquaintance up at the zoo the other day. The last time I saw him was in the lower part of Brazil when I was trying to push Yankee notions," said a commercial traveler. "This acquaintance is known as creaked screamer. He is one of the best fighters I ever bet my money on. He is about as large as a turkey and as spry as they come when his fighting blood is up. He has four sharp spurs instead of two, and the odd thing is the spurs are on the wings instead of the legs. The birds ran wild, but the natives tamed them and taught them to fight hawks and other enemies of poultry. They are fine poultry protectors. A fight between two of them is the most exciting thing in the way of sport down there and is more popular than a cockfight." --New York Sun.

A Growsome "Charm."

One of the most growsome "charms" is that which was at one time extensively used as a cure for wens. The hand of a dead criminal still hanging had to be rubbed three times over the wen. A correspondent in London Notes and Queries some few years since wrote that many persons were then living who in their younger days had undergone the ceremony, always, they maintained, with complete success. "On execution days of Northampton," he adds, "numbers of sufferers used to congregate around the gallows in order to receive the 'dead stroke' as it was termed. At the last execution which took place in that town a very few only were operated upon, so not much in consequence of decrease of faith as from the higher fee demanded by the hangman."

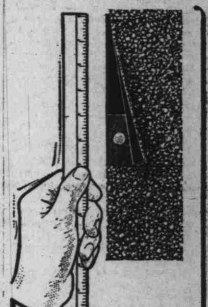

Paternal Fortitude.

I was calling, when the little daughter of my hostess came into the room. Knowing that her mother's mother had that morning returned home after a somewhat lengthy visit I said, "Weren't you sorry to have grandma go away, Patti?" "Yes, I was," she answered promptly, "and was mamma very sorry. But," and she paused thoughtfully for a moment, "I couldn't see at breakfast but that papa was just as cheerful as ever."

Moore's Air-Tight Heater

Does the Work of a Furnace!

It's by far the greatest heater on earth! Built on an entirely different principle than others. Heats by circulation instead of radiation. One Moore's Air Tight Heater will heat your entire house—upstairs and down—and keep every floor as warm as though you had a furnace. It heats the air in the farthest room to the same temperature as the air in the same room as the stove.

Saves Over Half Your Coal Bill!

Moore's Air Tight Heater burns hard coal or the cheapest kind of slack, and can be run at less than half the cost of other heaters. The Egg Shaped Dome and Hot Air Plus Firepot consumes all the carbon in the coal, thus overcoming the smoke and soot nuisance as well as making the fuel last longer. There are no clinkers and no cinders.

The Dust Plus takes all the dust and small ashes up the chimney, thus preventing them from collecting on the floor and furniture.

The Ashpan Apron keeps all ashes from falling on the floor when removing pan.

All parts are surface ground and fit together air tight. Nothing but asbestos wicking is used in mounting. It expands and contracts with the heat, so that the stove is perfectly air tight and under complete control at all times.

The Handsomest and Handiest Heater Ever Made!

All nickel plated parts are of the very highest finish, through a process known only to the House of Moore. None of the polished parts comes in direct contact with the fire. The polish can't burn off. One polishing keeps the stove like new for a whole year. The Air Tight Draft Control enables you to hold a fire from 24 to 48 hours. Fire never goes out over night, and is always under perfect control.

Stop in and let us show you the secret of our Open Rocoop Casing. It has many other features we haven't room here to explain. Let us prove to you that one of these heaters will replace two or even three others and do better work than all combined.

Call at our store and let us explain the wonderful quality of this Everlasting Firepot

TO TOBACCO GROWERS.

Gentlemen:— I have bought property at Springfield, Ky., and I am building a large leaf tobacco warehouse. This property is located near the L. & N. depot. This building will be 125 feet long and 70 ft wide, which will make a nice safe floor for the loose leaf business, and I am having it well lighted for the sale of tobacco. This is very necessary in a warehouse, as plenty of light is needed to see tobacco by. While I am a stranger to a great many of the tobacco growers of Washington county, I am no stranger to the business. I have spent my life mostly in the warehouse business, and I assure you I am in advance that whatever tobacco I may handle in my warehouse shall be handled in a way that will get the producer the best prices possible, and they shall have a fair and honest deal all the way through. I am here to help build up a nice leaf market in Springfield and I cannot do this unless the people over this county and other counties will help me do so. I would advise you when stripping to grade your tobacco carefully; keep your color tobacco to themselves, as in my opinion the market will be good for all such color types, and in grading your tobacco in a nice way you will certainly get paid for doing it. I lost a good crop of strong market on the 1910 crop. Of course, some of the crop has been damaged by house-burns, and this will not sell so high. I will be glad to hear from anyone who wants advice in regard to the sale of his tobacco. Thanking you in advance for any shipments of tobacco that you may give me, and assuring you I will protect your interests in the sale of same, I am,

Yours truly,
T. QUINN BERRY,
Manager.

LEACHMAN & CAMPBELL

His First Case

By DONALD ALLEN

Copyright, 1920, by Associated Literary Press

Mr. Paul Franklin had passed his examination and become a member of the bar. Not that he intended to hang out a shingle and become a practicing lawyer, but more to oblige the good old aunt who had brought him up and sent him through college and had often said:

"You will have the estate to manage during my life, and when I am gone you will have to manage it for yourself. One should be a lawyer to do these things."

Within a week after Paul had been granted a legal right to add "Attorney at Law" after his name, the old lawyer of the estate, in turning the papers over to the young man, said:

"There is one matter I wish to call your particular attention to. The estate owns Lake Placid. I stocked it with choice fish several years ago and put up many signs of 'No Trespass.' Those signs have been generally respected, but last summer one particular person, having a camp a short distance away, persisted in fishing in spite of all protests. I have just received word that the same person is back there for the summer and is fishing again. Our man there thinks an example must be made. He says that when he made protest this person told him to go to grass."

"A very nervous person," remarked the young lawyer.

"Truly so. I think you should write to the agent there to take out a warrant, make an arrest and bring the case to trial. You can go up there and appear for yourself and make it your first case. The Justice is bound to find a verdict for you and impose a smart fine, and that will deter other campers from trespassing. I don't want to get the reputation of being arbitrary and mean," said Paul.

"But people must respect the law," put in the aunt as she came into the discussion. "If the laws can't be enforced what will become of us? People have no more right to catch my fish than to catch my chickens. It is my desire, Paul, that you take up this case. Those people who come out from the city to camp for the summer are a very reckless lot. They don't pay the slightest attention to signs. What they need is a good scare."

Lake Placid was three miles from the manor house, on another piece of land. It was a favorite place for summer camping, and there were no restrictions except as to fishing. It had been stocked with carp as a food of the aunt. Word was passed to the man who acted as watchdog, and in two or three days subsequently he reported that a summons had been issued for the guilty and defiant party, and he named the date when the trial was to come off before the Justice of the peace in the village.

Mr. Attorney Franklin drew a mental picture of a bearded ruffian, with a political pull who was setting country law at defiance and denuding Lake Placid of its carp in spite of all signs and protests, and he at once looked up the law in treatise and made himself familiar with it. When he had learned all about it, he invented a plea to the effect that

Of course, the defendant would call for one. He went out to the orchard and repeated his plea over and over again. It was strong. It was logical. It was convincing. It wound up by saying that if beetle-browed and black-bearded ruffians could steal an old lady's carp and not suffer the consequences, they could also break their way into her house at midnight and cut her throat and still go free.

The jury must not look at the value of the carp, but at the principle of the thing, and he would leave the case in their hands, feeling that justice would prevail in the land. The title would prevail in the land. The

He heard the plea when it had been translated down and got into shape, and he fervently exclaimed:

"Paul, that will be one of the greatest pleas of the decade! The jury must convict the ruffian without leaving the bonny aunt a penny for a copy for her children and the village at the hour named in the papers. All the campers had turned out for the trial, as well as all the idlers of the village. His honor was on his dignity. The defendant had retained a lawyer. There was to be a mighty legal battle.

"We ought to apply for three or four warrants," said the watchdog, as Paul arrived. "The same person was out fishing again this morning, and when I yelled at her she ran her tongue out at me!"

Paul did not catch the "her" and "she." It was the black-bearded ruffian he was thinking of. Under summons, and yet fishing for more carp? There must be no letup until the doors of the county jail closed behind him. It was for Paul to state his case to court and spectators. He had a feeling of trepidation as he arose, but it passed as soon as he heard his own voice. He didn't see the black-bearded ruffian among the crowd, but of course he was there.

There were men, the lawyer told the court, who respected the law, and there were others who deemed themselves superior to it. This was a case where a man, coming from a city notorious for its graft and "pulls," was deliberately and defiantly trampling the law under foot. He would bring forward witnesses to prove that the man had not only seen the signs of "No trespass," but had deliberately and defiantly

Here there was some tittering and giggling in the room, and his honor rapped for order. "Yes, this man—this ruffian, who had been accustomed to trample on the law—"

"More giggling and applause."

"You should keep to the case," kindly advised the court.

"Thanks. There were the signs of 'no trespass,' and yet this man—"

"What man?" asked the opposing counsel, while many spectators laughed.

"The guilty party, sir," replied Paul with all proper austerity.

"But let me explain that there is no man under summons," said his honor. "Can you be thinking of another case?"

There was more laughter, and poor Paul realized that something had happened to the machinery to stop the boat.

"It's a woman!" whispered a man behind him.

"It's a girl," whispered another.

"It's that staving-looking girl in front of you!" whispered a third.

"Your honor, I was led to believe that a ruffian had been trampling on the law," said Paul, as he looked around in a helpless way.

"No. The summons was for Miss Katherine Lacy, and she's here in court. I haven't heard anything of a ruffian."

"But—but—" persisted Paul, as he saw the defendant at last and noted the fact that she was one of the best looking girls he had seen in the village.

"My client pleads not guilty," said the opposing counsel. "She will admit being on the lake in a boat at various times, and of fishing for fish, but she denies catching any. She also denies that she is a ruffian. If my learned brother on the other side wishes to go ahead with the case—"

"But how can I?" asked Paul in a helpless way. "I prepared to prosecute a black-bearded ruffian who was trampling the law under foot, but here I find—"

"A young lady who hasn't been trampling," finished his honor. "I think it would be well for the court to adjourn until tomorrow, and let that window together and see if some amicable understanding cannot be arrived at."

Miss Lacy rose up with mischievous eyes and walked, and the blushing young attorney could do no less than follow her. There wasn't much conversation after reaching the window. He said:

"My dear Miss Lacy I beg your pardon a thousand times over."

"Don't mention it."

"If I had known—"

"But you didn't."

"But you may catch every fish in the lake."

"All that was left was to withdraw the case and take the railway in good part. Of course, the young lady of the law found his way over to the camp, and of course he was hospitably received and before the camping season was over—well, the 'ruffian' and the lawyer were engaged to be married."

The Place for Them.

"He looked all around the brilliant lighted hall, where music was sounding and men and women were gaily tripping in the dance."

"I see nothing but false faces about me in this apparent scene of gaiety," he said.

"Well, what other kind do you want at a masquerade?" asked his friend.

Against the Rules.

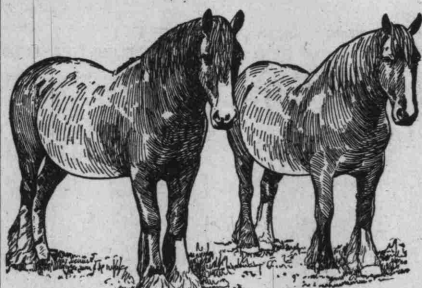

"He lived next door to a man for 10 years without even learning his neighbor's name."

"Can you imagine anybody being so unobscure?"

"Yes, yes. You see, the warder wouldn't let them talk."

LABOR INVOLVED MAKES DRAFT HORSES PROFITABLE

No Class of Stock Will Give Better Returns Than Animals With Weight and Quality—Care of Colt.

Prize Winning English Draft Mare.

The colt should have a roomy box stall. If you have two colts, keep them together when the mares are at work, as there is no animal that likes company better than a colt, says a writer in American Cultivator. As they get older see that they have plenty of good cover hay and bright oats to eat. It is well to have a little pasture near the barn and let them into this when the mares are at work. If the fence with good, woven wire, high enough so they can not get their heads over it. The pasture should be arranged so they can reach it. After a little while from the flies. Leave the cover to the oak box open, so they can help themselves. Keep a pail of water in the stall where they are kept. Some colts will take skim milk at once, but be careful and not give them too much to commence with, say two quarts at first, and as they get accustomed to it you can give them five or six quarts twice a day. This you can feed all winter, and they will go on to pasture in the spring in fine shape. If they are eating oats and drinking milk at weaning time there will be no setback, which always occurs if they are not. When they are about a year old and on the pasture, we gradually wean them from the oats and milk, and they get nothing but pasture until fall, when they are again fed grain and hay.

We always stable all of our colts at night, but they have a roomy yard or field to run in in the day time, so that they get plenty of exercise.

We always break our colts to harness before they are three years old. Get them used to the harness before spring work begins. Work them half a day at a time to commence with, and see that their collars and harness fit them well.

When the weather gets warm clip your colts. By so doing you may avoid sore shoulders. If a colt gets a sore shoulder, let him rest a few days and heal it up. If you continue to work him and the sore keeps getting worse, you may have a shoulder that will always bother you when he is put to hard work.

We aim to sell all of our geldings before they are seven years old. When you intend to sell your horses see that they are in proper shape. They should be fat, as that is what the market demands. Feed them on good wholesome food; corn can be fed to quite an extent at this time, with bran and a little oil meal.

By breeding the right horses, those with weight and quality, I know of no class of stock that will bring better returns for our high prices, and (considering the amount of labor involved) than good draft horses.

The first advantage gained by working up unmarketable fruit into cider is that it is converted into a condensed and portable form convenient for handling and storing. The second object is to convert a valuable portion of the crop into a marketable commodity, which would otherwise be wasted. The cost, the time and labor of working up several hundred bushels of apples into cider is only nominal as compared with the value of the cider itself. If properly handled, apples that have been bruised in handling are imperfectly developed, too small and speckled apples which would not be worth the cost of packing, can be utilized in this manner and the orchardist's revenue largely enhanced. The maximum of successful financial enterprise are applicable to the business of a practical orchardist as to any other. The little things must not be overlooked; all the byproducts must be utilized, for from them is derived much of the profit.

APPLE CULLS CAUSE LOSS

It Will Prove Profitable to Squeeze Juice Out of Discards and Sell in Natural State.

(By JOHN J. TENNER.)

The amount of money lost by farmers every year through lack of interest or knowledge of the means to dispose of unmarketable apples has never been estimated. That is one of the big wastes on every farm where many apples are grown, and where commercial fruit raising is made the main feature of the farm.

Even an orchardist who is in the business as a specialist must suffer more or less in this loss.

As 95 per cent. of ripe apples is juice which sells for good prices either in its natural state or as vinegar, it pays big to squeeze out this product through a press instead of allowing it to go to waste.

There are many kinds of cider presses, but an hydraulic machine extracts the very last possible drop of juice to be obtained and leaves very

OXFORD SHEEP VERY PROLIFIC

The Oxford sheep originated in England in the early part of the nineteenth century from a cross of Cotswold and Hampshire Down. They have been known since 1857 as Oxfordshire or Oxford Down, and are now widely distributed over the United States and Canada. They are the largest and heaviest of the Down breeds. When in good flesh the ram should weigh 250 to 275 pounds and the ewes from 200 to 225 pounds. The wool is rather coarser than any other of the medium wool breeds and the fleece is heavier, weighing from 10 to 12 pounds unwashed. The face is usually an even dark gray or brown, with or without a gray spot on the tip of the nose. They are best adapted for lands furnishing good pasture, triplets being not uncommon. The lambs grow very rapidly and are of good form. The chief shortcoming of the breed is that it is not as hardy as some others.

The Spots Disappeared.

Mrs. Dolan lived in a district which was not so favorable for the outdoor household experiments recommended by the Ladies' Helper as it might have been. This fact Mrs. Dolan was rapidly assimilating, and in a manner not so uncommon as it might be she blamed the estimable periodical for her difficulties.

"I wish I had a holt o' that woman that runs the 'Handy Hints' department when she comes on a morning after an early excursion into the back yard, whence she returned in high daiguen."

"I thought you thought she was a grand wain," said Mr. Dolan, cautiously testing his cup of tea.

"Well, I've changed me mind, as I've the rights to do," replied his wife. "She said to put soy on thin stints in the tablecloth, and I've it out over-night on the line, an' they'd be gone entirely with morning come. Sure 'twould the tablecloth that's gone—the de-seaving woman that she is!—YOUTH'S Companion."

FILL ELIMINATES GRADE.

Macadam Road From Cortland to Ithaca Near Completion.
The above cut gives one an idea of the vast amount of work that has been accomplished at the Golf Hill, changing a steep, crooked road to a straight macadamized highway with a grade of about 7 per cent.

This is on the road known as No. 685, Dryden-Cortland, extending from the Dryden village line in Tompkins county, N. Y., to the Cortland county line, a distance of 2.50 miles. The contract was let to J. McCormick of East Providence, R. I. The engineering was in charge of A. L. Northrop of Dryden, the division engineer's assistant for Tompkins county. The engineers on the work were L. E. Snyder of Syracuse and Harold Fox of Canastota.

The change of grade has been effected by cutting away the top of the hills on either side and filling in the valley between. The fill at the culvert is twenty-five feet high, eighteen feet above the old road bed. The culvert

Free Sample Aids Old Men

The sudden change from years of activity of both body and mind to the quiet of later years causes the human system to undergo many changes, chief of which is in the digestive organs.

It becomes harder and harder to get the bowels to move promptly and regularly and in consequence many elderly men suffer not only from the basic trouble, constipation, but from indigestion, headache, belching, sour stomach, drowsiness after meals, and other troubles. It is of all necessary to keep the bowels open as to time the bowels empty themselves naturally. A violent cathartic or purgative is not only unnecessary but harmful, just as well.

After you have got through experimenting with salts and oils and waters of lime you may have become convinced that they do only temporary good at best, mild, gentle, pleasant-tasting, laxative tonic, that is especially adapted to the requirements of old people, women and children, and yet is effective enough for anybody. Your druggist, who has handled it successfully for a quarter of a century, will sell you a bottle for fifty cents or one dollar, but if you want to make a test of it before sending any money send your name and address to Dr. Caldwell and he will send you a sample bottle free of charge.

This remedy rapidly dispelling all other forms of medication for the cure of stomach, liver and bowels troubles. Families like Mr. C. P. Wisner of Syracuse, N. Y., and Mrs. J. C. Wisner of 215 N. Notre Dame street, South Bend, Ind., who have tested it and know its value to the old and young of the family. Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels troubles. Write for free literature, your name in detail, and he will reply to you in detail. For the sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or address in Dr. W. B. Caldwell, also Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

The old, old story, told times without number, and repeated over and over again for the last 36 years, but it is always a welcome story to those in search of health—There is nothing in the world that cures coughs and colds as quickly as Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Sold by all Druggists.
